This footpath is very important to the local and visitors to Holmfirth as it is on one of the most popular walks. This was one of the reasons Kirklees council planning turned the rerouting of this footpath down. In January this year. The owners of the house which this footpath runs through knew the footpath was here when they purchased the house. So if they don't like it, sell it. The alternative footpath comes out 200 yards down a very fast road NSL which is also on really tight bends whereas the original one pedestrians can see both directions and the adjoining footpath is straight across the road. From the rerouted path there's no footpath which is another danger to overcome. (ie) 60mph traffic, tight bends, and no footpath. It would be totally irresponsible to put the public walkers in such dangerous situation for the whim of a house owner that already knew that they had purchased a house with a footpath going up a shared drive.

Yours sincerely Nigel Peter Kay
